

Put Yourself in Our Boots Workplace Safety Campaign

www.ourboots.ca

Turn off the lights, trigger the alarm and put yourself in the boots of emergency responders – police, firefighters and paramedics – who could be at your place of work in dark, unfamiliar surroundings and under stressful circumstances.

Your workplace is their workplace . . . is it safe?

The John Petropoulos Memorial Fund is actively promoting its Put Yourself in Our Boots workplace safety campaign by raising public awareness about the importance of reducing preventable injuries and fatalities and promoting workplace safety for emergency responders – because their workplace is every place.

The campaign features an educational 10-minute safety video that provides important tips for the public on how they can do their part to create safe workplaces for everyone. The video is supported by a series of 30-second public service announcements that are currently airing across Canada and the United States.

The safety video visually demonstrates the potential hazards that emergency responders repeatedly encounter in:

- Office and professional buildings
- Industrial yards, warehouses, and construction sites
- Traffic while operating emergency services vehicles

The DVD includes the safety video, three Put Yourself in Our Boots PSAs, a one-minute trailer, extended interviews, safety tips, and two bonus PSAs produced by the JPMF.

“What may fail, what could fall . . . if it could happen, it will happen.”

Ryan Schur, Occupational Health and Safety Officer, Alberta Employment & Immigration

By making workplaces safe for emergency responders, you make them safe for everyone.

Make the change. Save a life.
